WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Pres. Hoover Thursday designated Hugh S. Gibson as American Ambassador to Belgium as the American representative on an experts committee which will work out the details of the intergovernmental debt moratorium.

Gibson will act as an observer. Frederick Livesey, reparations expert of the senate department will be sent to London to assist Gibson.

Local Truck Crop Attracts Interest

B. T. Clark, of Tupelo, Miss., Writes to J. S. Wilson, Sr., of Columbus

Interest in the truck crop development of Southwest Arkansas, particularly its berry crops, is revealed in a letter from B. T. Clark, banker and planter of Tupelo, Miss., written to J. S. Wilson, Sr., of Columbus, this country.

Indicating his plan to emulate the heavy production of Hempstead county by planting a similar crop at upelo, Mr. Clark continues:

"If I do, my raspberries won't be anywhere near going to also buy some of the Young Berries and plant them. I know a fellow in Illinois that has made two million dollars on dew berries the last fifteen years. Such berries we never thought of until the balance of the world is about to put us out of the cotton business."

"The country is greatly disturbed over the financial condition. Now the Lord seems to be with us and we have about the best crop we ever had and it is being made for less money than any one ever before. The fact is, if it continues as prospects are now, other things besides cotton will pay all of our debts for this year and they can use the cotton on debts that they owe, and those that do not owe will have it to put in the bank; and I look forward to seeing the country in as prosperous condition within twelve months as ever known and business upon a more stable basis, as we will have learned how to buy little and make a heap of everything."

"We had a bank fail here for around five million dollars that they sent off out of this immediate section, sent it to Chicago, New York, Philadelphia, in fact all of the money centers. If we had this five million here now that we could use our people would hardly know there was a financial strait in the country. B. T. CLARK."

It was Mr. Clark who wrote Mr. Wilson a graphic description of the great money panics of the last century in Mississippi, a letter which The Star published last year.

Marshall Eason Cleared By Jury

Declared Not Guilty of Murder in Death of Elmer Varnadore

DEWITT.—Marshall Eason, charged with the murder of Elmer Varnadore here November 1, 1930, was acquitted Wednesday after four hours' deliberation by the jury. Empaneling of the jury was not completed until late Wednesday afternoon and witnesses in the case were examined until 11 last night.

Arguments were begun in the morning lasted until 1:30 p. m. Only two cases were tried by the jury term of Circuit Court after the Eason case was completed. All other cases were postponed until the January term.

Oil Gusher Causes Woe in Rumanian Vineyards

BUCHAREST.—(AP)—Oil means dollars to some people but one of Rumania's largest gushers, just brought in, has spelled grief to the section around about.

The district has been famous for its hillside vines, some of the choicest vintages of Rumania coming from the sunny slopes of the valley in which the wild well is located.

Oil spurts far above the derrick top, and it has sprayed the surrounding vineyards and spoiled the grape harvest. The gusher is owned by Italian interests.

Texas Fliers Well On Way

Rockefeller Has Quiet Birthday

Spends the Day With Family on 8,000-Acre Estate

TARRYTOWN, N. Y.—(AP)—The distribution of dimes and nickies by John D. Rockefeller was unusually widespread and gleeful Wednesday. It was his ninety-second birthday and the head of the house of Rockefeller celebrated it quietly at his 8,000-acre estate near Sleepy Hollow.

At the 6 o'clock dinner, which he ate with almost his entire family gathered around one big table, a frosted birthday cake was cut. Mr. Rockefeller ate his share and pronounced it excellent.

Mr. and Mrs. John D. Rockefeller, Jr., their daughter, Abie, and her husband, David M. Milton, dined at Pocantico Hills, the Rockefeller family seat. The youngest member of the party was three-year-old Abby Milton, Grandchild of John D. Rockefeller Sr.

There were extra guards at the double locked gates to Pocantico Hills and inside an augmented private control patrolled the grounds to discourage the advances of well-meaning intruders on the birthday celebration.

Girl Dies After Fall From Porch

Ago Fatal to Alice A. Injuries Received 2 Weeks Creed of Magnolia

MAGNOLIA.—Alice Audrah Creed, aged 10, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Creed of Magnolia, died in a Texarkana hospital Wednesday night from an injury received here at the family home two weeks ago when she stumbled and fell from the rear porch as she ran to get her bathing suit from a line on the porch for a shower bath.

She underwent an operation two days later when a burst kidney was removed. It was learned that the other was injured. A second operation was performed yesterday afternoon. Funeral services were held this afternoon at Central Baptist church by the Rev. J. B. Luck. She is survived by her parents.

Convicted Burglar Gets Freedom From Parnell

LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—Governor Parnell granted an indefinite furlough to Roy Sessions convicted at the January, 1931, term of Circuit court on burglary and grand larceny charges and sentenced to two years imprisonment. Clemency was granted on the recommendation of the trial judge, the prosecuting attorney and because he is the sole support of his mother.

NEW YORK.—(AP)—Miss Evelyn Wilson, 23, musical comedy star who disappeared Sunday from her sister's apartment while on an errand to a drug store for her mother, reappeared at her home on 72nd street Wednesday, having been driven there by a taxi cab she hailed at 175th street and Broadway. Arthur Fitzgerald, the taxi driver, told detectives Miss Wilson jumped out of the taxi cab without paying him.

Police who attempted to question the actress were at first barred from the apartment and later an interview was arranged.

40 New Laws Effective in Oklahoma Next Saturday

Many of State's Old Laws Are Revised and New Ones Substituted. Governor Murray Will Begin Immediate Action Under Many of Them

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla.—(AP)—Much governed Oklahoma will become still more governed Saturday when approximately 40 laws, enacted by the last legislature without the emergency clause, become effective. Saturday marks the end of the 90-day period required by law before the acts may become enforceable.

Governor W. H. Murray may begin immediate action under some of them. Commenting recently on activities of Governor Harry Woodring of Kansas and the Kansas blue sky commission in barring City Service common stock from the state, Governor Murray said that when this state's new securities law becomes effective July 11, he may start a fight to prohibit sales of certain stocks.

The new law does away with the old state issues commission and creates a blue sky board with powers and penalties sufficient to prevent sales of questionable securities.

Another important law that will become effective will enforce col-

Missing Boy Found By Dog in Swamp

Youth Up to Neck in Mud When He Is Discovered Alive Wednesday

HALIFAX, Miss.—(AP)—Joseph Rego, six-year-old boy who disappeared Monday while berry picking with his parents, was discovered alive in a remote swampland by a dog Wednesday and the boy was up to his neck in water and in a state of coma. Rescuers plunged in and removed him.

The child had been the object of widespread search and there were rumors he had been kidnapped by persons in a large sedan seen on a nearby road about the time the boy became lost.

The child later told Gilbert Thompson, whose dog found him, and others, that he had spent practically the entire time since he became separated from his parents in the mud swamp. He was taken to his home, not far away, and put to bed. Thompson's attention was attracted to the lad by the loud barking of the dog which nosed its way through the wood land to the edge of the swamp.

Jones and Robbins Near Halfway Mark On Flight to Japan

Trim 'Fort Worth' Recognized at Various Points Along Their Route

FAVORED BY WIND

Were Heading West Across Bering Strait at Last Report

NOME, Alaska.—(AP)—The monoplane Fort Worth passed over here early Thursday completing about 2100 miles of its proposed 5100 mile non-stop refueling flight from Seattle, Washington to Tokyo, Japan.

The plane was accompanied by its refueling ship and both were headed directly west across Bering Strait.

SEATTLE, Wash.—Ideal weather was in sight as the Texans started the adventure which, if successful, will give them $25,000 offered by a Japanese newspaper for the first flight of this kind.

Riding a tailwind at an estimated height of 6,500 feet, they made rapid progress in the flight that will take them across the stormy Bering sea, probably down the mainland of Siberia and over the Kurile islands to Japan. They hope to reach Japan by 7 a. m. (P. S. T.) Friday.

The Fort Worth was loaded with 300 gallons of gasoline when it took to the air Wednesday morning after its second dash down the runway of Boeing Field. Robbins, the pilot, barely got the plane off the field at the end of the runway.

Robbins and Jones, the navigator, wasted no time after they decided to leave Seattle, and lifted their ship into a dusky sky an hour and 12 minutes after they got out of bed. The flight was delayed five days because of the difficulty their refueling plane had in reaching Fairbanks.

Supply Ship Goes Along After the Fairbanks' contact, a second refueling contact may be decided upon over Solomon, 30 miles north-east of Nome. The last refueling will be made over the coast of Siberia. The tri-motored refueling machine will accompany the fliers from Fairbanks to Siberia. It will stop at Solomon for a fresh load of gasoline.

Soon after Robbins and Jones stepped into their plane in street attire and sailed out, reports began coming in of their appearance over the Fraser river in British Columbia.

The machine carried no radio but the fliers were making certain that points along their route recognized them.

Although the 5,100-mile flight is estimated to take approximately 55 hours Robbins and Jones expect to have daylight all the way. They will travel through Alaska and down the northern coast of Siberia at night but at this time of the year that region has 24 hours of light.

Has Blank License; Fined For Fishing

HOLLY GROVE, Ark.—(AP)—Vernie Yor, Memphis sporting goods dealer, had 200 Arkansas fishing licenses in his possession, but he was fined $5 and costs for fishing without one just the same.

Yor's concern is the Memphis agent for the Arkansas Game and Fish Commission and sells licenses for non-residents to fish and hunt in Arkansas. When arrested he had $1,000 worth of licenses in his pocket but one of which was in his pocket but was blank.

He contended the license he had torn from the book of 200 was his and entitled him to fish. The license had been signed by Guy Amsler, secretary of the game and fish commission, but lacked his signature as agent.

Judge Thomas Mull ruled the licenses non-transferable and the one Yor had was void because it was not properly issued.

Unique Court House at Mena Has Strange History

Pine Log Structure, Built in 1851, Believed to Be Only One of Its Kind in the United States. Noted in Civil War Days as Harbor for Crooks

MENA, Ark.—(AP)—Originally the cabin home of a pioneer who settled in the Ouachita mountains shortly after the Mexican war, Mena's city hall is built of pine logs and much of the history of the early rough and tumble life of the Arkansas-Oklahoma border centers around it.

The log cabin city hall, believed the only one of its kind in the United States, has a background of history and tradition which includes Civil war happenings, activities of the notorious James brothers' gang, pioneer postal service, the building of a railroad and visits by William Jennings Bryan and Carrie Nation.

An accepted story is that it once was used by Jesse and Frank James as a rendezvous. While there are many who doubt the tale, there is proof that in 1874 Jesse James and three followers were accused of robbing a stage coach near Hot Springs and escaped through Polk county into what then was Indian Territory, now Oklahoma.

With $4,000 loot, the four were pursued through the Ouachita mountains and fought off an Arkansas posse on the summit of Kok Tukolo Mountain in the Choctaw nation.

This was established two years after the robbery and 10 years after Mena was founded, by a stranger who appeared at Dallas, then the seat of Polk county, and introduced himself as Captain James Smith.

The stranger gave such a detailed account of the robbery and the route followed in the escape that he convinced inhabitants of the little inland town he was a member of the James and Younger brothers' gang.

The log cabin at this time was occupied by Thomas Mills, who had six sons some of whom were known as outlaws. Tradition has it that Captain Smith participated in several border raids with the Mills boys.

In addition to serving Polk county as judge, Thomas Mills was a mail contractor and directed the service on half a dozen routes centered in the Dallas postoffice. The carriers on these routes, which were from 50 to 125 miles long, rode horseback through the woods, forded unbridged mountain streams and went through the valleys and over the mountains of the wild border section.

They carried the mail in saddle bags and protected it with rifles and six shooters. The nearest railroad connection was Stringtown, 135 miles away.

The log cabin that became a city hall was erected in 1851 by Bill Shelton, a crippled veteran of the Mexican war.

Shelton and his family were forced to abandon their home during the turbulent days between 1861 and 1865 because of the activities of border outlaws who made the Ouachita highlands their hiding place.

These early guerrilla bands preyed on both Union and Confederate soldiers.

Dynamiter Begins Serving Sentence

Charley Brown Taken to Little Rock Wednesday by Sheriff

TEXARKANA.—Charley Brown, confessed dynamiter of the Garland City bridge, was taken to the state penitentiary at Little Rock Wednesday to start serving his five-year term. Brown also was fined $500.

Others taken to the capital were Clarence Gross, under sentences of two and one years, to run concurrently, on liquor charges, and a man who escaped some time ago from the asylum.

The men were taken by Sheriff Walter Harris, Jailer Will Harris, and Constable Walter Crowell.

Carl Bell, named by Brown as his accomplice in blowing up the bridge last winter, was acquitted by a Miller county circuit court jury.

Real Values Drop In Pope County

$90,000 Less Than in Former Years Says Tax Assessor

RUSSELLVILLE, Ark.—(AP)—Total assessed value of Pope county real estate, including both rural and urban, dropped more than $90,000 during the past year. Tax Assessor J. N. Grant said. Blame for the decrease was placed on depressed conditions which caused property values to take a downward trend.

Comparative figures show the total county value of real estate this year was $4,089,338 as compared with $4,161,743 last year. The tax assessor said, however, that the two figures would be brought close together when final assessments and checkups were made.

JONESBORO, Ark.—(AP)—The Jonesboro city council has ordered a reduction in salaries of city employees which it was estimated, will save $5,000 annually. Reductions of 10 percent were ordered in the salaries of firemen, policemen and street workers. The force of several departments was ordered decreased.

PEACH CROP MADE THIS SEASON AT LOW COST

LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—Reports to agricultural authorities indicate peach growers are making a more rapid recovery from last year's drought than any other group of farmers in Arkansas.

While growers are anticipating that the price this year will be in line with prices of other perishable commodities, the peach crop is being made at an unusually low cost because of strict economy which has been practiced.

The Agitation of Traders Against Board to Bring About Action

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—The Farm Board may issue a statement before the end of this month outlining a definite policy for the handling and stabilization of supplies of cotton during the coming crop season.

Carl Williams, cotton member of the board, said Thursday that the southern exchange, Savannah, Ga., Rock and Memphis have requested a new statement of the policy to be followed in the market uncertainty and these requests were under consideration.

Williams said agitation of traders against the Farm Board holdings had assumed a character similar to the recent demands of the grain trade for a definite statement policy.

Women Charged of Murdering Man

Man Quit Newspaper Reporting to Become Bootlegger

NASHVILLE, Tenn.—(AP)—Two women faced murder indictments Tuesday for the slaying of a man, and Acken, scion of a wealthy Tennessee family who quit newspaper reporting to become a bootlegger.

They are Mrs. Hadley Mosley, 35, and Mrs. Joseph H. Acken, 32, who became the youth's "sweetheart" after Acken had killed her husband in a fight over liquor territory, and Mrs. Wes Ingram, wife of a Nashville bootleg king.

Their indictments came after testimony before the grand jury by Mrs. Mosley's eight-year-old son, and weeks of investigation instigated by Acken's aged parents, Colonel and Mrs. Joseph H. Acken, who refused to believe their son committed suicide as a police report announced.

Mrs. Mosley was indicted on a first degree murder charge and Mrs. Ingram was named as an accessory before the fact.

Young Acken killed Hadley Mosley last December when, he told police, Mosley threatened his life for "cutting in" on his liquor trade. On May 9, several days before his trial, Acken's partly clad body was found in a bedroom of the Mosley home.

Mrs. Mosley said she believed he killed himself because she refused to marry him.

Gospel Comes in Earthen Vessels

Rev. Chester Estes Preaching Revival at Local Church of Christ

The revival meeting being conducted at the Church of Christ, Fifth and Grady streets, continues with interest. Evangelist Chester Estes spoke Wednesday night to an attentive audience on the subject: "The Gospel in Earthen Vessels."

He said in part: "The reason for selecting this subject is, because so many people have the idea that they must wait for something supernatural to happen to them in conversion. This idea originated with the rich man in hell, who wanted God's Word set aside and a miracle performed."

"The gospel is a treasure to be valued very highly. God has decreed that it shall be made known through earthen vessels. An earthen vessel is a vessel pertaining to the earth. Paul, a preacher, was an earthen vessel. Yea, a chosen vessel to bear God's name to the world. The Great Commission was given to earthen vessels. An angel could not, in harmony with God's will, tell sinners what to do to be saved, as angels are heavenly vessels. Christ himself, refused to tell Saul of Tarsus what to do, but sent him into the city to learn from an earthen vessel, Ananias. The material of which the Bible is made makes it an earthen vessel, yet it contains a divine message. You never read about a conversion but that a gospel preacher was always present, to proclaim the message. Sometimes Providence intervenes, angels are dispatched and the Spirit operates, not directly upon the heart of the sinner but to bring him in contact with the sinner, that the sinner might hear, believe and obey the gospel."

Evangelist Estes called attention to the different cases of conversion in

"Eye" Sees 6500 Stars at Once

This queer-looking "eye," known as a planetarium, which projects 6500 stars at one time regardless of weather conditions, is to be placed in the Benjamin Franklin Memorial and Institute at Philadelphia. The planetarium will be housed in a chamber 65 feet in diameter shaped like a hemisphere which will be lined with white fabric. The instrument will project 6500 images on this fabric at once while a lecturer explains to the audience by means of an electrical pointer the names and positions of the stars and planets.

of love for the first time to Europe. He will speak Thursday on the Establishment of the Church.

Arkadelphia Youth Is Hurt in Fall From Car

ARKADELPHIA.—Travis Berry, 15, foster son of Dr. and Mrs. J. A. Boudreau, was seriously hurt when he fell from a fast moving auto to the pavement at Ninth and Clinton streets. He was taken to the Townsend hospital where it was found he had one, and possibly two fractures of the skull and a badly bruised arm.

Young Berry was perched on the back of a car driven by William Garis, young boy of this city. The car was traveling west on Clinton street and near Ninth, swerved quickly to avoid another car. It was then that Berry lost hold and hit the pavement broadside.

Friends took him to the Barney Birkhead residence where he lay unconscious for several minutes. He was taken to the hospital in an ambulance and regained a state of semi-consciousness.

Don't Rasp Your Throat With Harsh Irritants

"Reach for a LUCKY instead"

What effect have harsh irritants present in all raw tobaccos upon the throat? A famous authority, retained by us to study throat irritation, says:

"The tissues above and below the vocal chords and the vocal chords themselves may become acutely or chronically congested as a result of the inhalation of irritating fumes in the case of chemists for example."

LUCKY STRIKE'S exclusive "TOASTING" Process, which includes the use of modern Ultra Violet Rays, expels certain harsh irritants present in all raw tobaccos. We sell these expelled irritants to manufacturers of chemical compounds. They are not present in your LUCKY STRIKE. So "Consider your Adam's Apple"—that is your larynx—your voice box—it contains your vocal chords. Don't rasp your throat with harsh irritants. Be careful in your choice of cigarettes. ## HOOKS AND SLIDES

Robbie Rampant
 Robbie may have laughed when he was the season with a tail. But when they started to play, those old Baltimore Boys were not to be trifled with. Materially assisted by an old man named Jack Quinn, who was the rocking chair has been waiting a score of years, and a discarded soap named Joe, who was sent away washed by last year, the Baltimore Boys have burst out into a fine frenzy. Watch out for them up there behind the top.

The team this year has what it lacks during its slump of play. That is, competitiveness. It might be added, especially as far as the Cardinals are concerned.

Not Spanish Blood

A LITTLE episode that occurred when the team was in St. Louis recently forecasts some furious action between the two teams when they meet again. Catcher Al Lopez, from the Little Spanish town near Tampa known as Thor City, allowed the spirit of the Conquistadors to rise up wildly within him during an argument with George Watkins of the Cards.

Al started a crushing fight for Watkins, but it missed its mark. Watkins started one right back at Al. He was wild, too. Then players separated the two, and the harm done except spiritually.

"I'll lay one hundred bucks on the line," said Lopez the next day. "I'll bet that right swing back that I'll throw at him. He ducked under it and got into a crouch. I got my right hand free but Chick (Lafay

Retort Courteous

LOPEZ had a pretty good day out of that. The fiery little Brooklyn catcher protested violently when Umpire Donnelly interfered with a throw to second base. Lopez, whose facial resemblance to Mickey Cochrane is remarkable, also can peg a word or two that burns.

Old Sarge Gabby Street came out to remonstrate with the way Lopez was rebuking Mr. Donnelly.

Then spoke Senior Lopez in this wise to Professor Street:

"Get back into your box, you bush league mugs! When you're wanted Branch Rickey will send for you."

Well, of all the nerve!

Projected Span at the Golden Gate Will Be Painted Gold

SAN FRANCISCO.—(P)—A golden bridge to match the Golden Gate. That's what designers have decided to make of the highway bridge, the world's longest suspension span, on which work is to be started soon in a famous scenic setting.

The fabricated steel work hanging 60 massive cables from towers the height of the Woolworth building will be coated with a gold paint developed to resist the action of fog and salt air and to reflect the sun's rays.

This will keep the Golden Gate truly golden. By night, an elaborate system of flood lighting and colored lights outlining the cables and structural lines of the three spans, towers and approaches, will give the graceful structure a beauty observable for many miles.

The towers will be surmounted by spiral beacons, and the piers will serve as lighthouses for San Francisco harbor.

To achieve symmetry, the side span on the Marin county shore of the Golden Gate will be the same length as that on the San Francisco side

(1,100 feet), although virtually all of the former will be over land and a portion of the hill will be blasted to obtain clearance.

In addition to unusual concessions to beauty, the structure will possess numerous engineering distinctions.

The central span, measuring 4,200 feet between piers, will be 500 feet longer than any other bridge, built or projected.

The center will be 242 feet above mean high water, making the bridge floor the highest ever built over a navigable stream.

Fast elevators within the 746-foot towers, also the highest ever constructed for bridge purposes, will carry passengers to glass enclosed observation platforms.

The four 36-inch cables from which the 60-foot roadway will be suspended will by contraction and expansion due to temperature changes raise or lower the floor in the main span's center a total of six feet.

To cope with any stress due to possible earth crust movements or any local condition, it is believed, the floor could move in the center a total distance of 21 feet in either direction without disastrous results. The natural sway of the bridge will be several feet.

The new structure will reduce the present crossing time of 34 minutes, by ferry, to eight minutes.

It will have a maximum capacity of 250,000 automobiles each 24 hours, but it is contemplated that not more than 5,870 cars will use it daily the first year, working up to 28,000 by 1970.

With six lanes for traffic and provision for electric trains, the bridge is expected to repay its cost of $32,000,000 and accumulate a surplus of $17,000,000 in 40 years.

LONDON.—(P)—General Dawes, whom Britons insist shall live up to his caustic reputation, is being credited with another joke.

She is in Willow Stream, in a role as a mother, before she leaves, she has a romantic encounter with a handsome stranger. McELIOTT comes to tell LIANE the whole in the queerest way possible. At a party given by McELIOTT, LIANE, who has a blonde hair and a beautiful face, meets the handsome stranger whose name is VAN ROBERT.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XIV

THERE it was in black and white. Nora had left the morning paper beside Liane's breakfast tray. She read: "Mr. and Mrs. John Fenlon Ladd of this city and Willow Stream, L. I., announce the engagement of their daughter, Muriel Norton Ladd, to Mr. James Van Dusen Robert, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Edward Creighton Robert of New York and Newport. The ceremony will take place—"

Liane saw no more. Blindly she pushed the paper from her, began automatically to pour her coffee. This morning the luxury of the breakfast table failed to please her. Van Robert and Muriel! She just didn't believe it. It was stupid. There was no meaning in it.

Why then had he said, "Sweet child, I had to come back to see you"? Was that just a "line," the sort of thing he said to every woman? Oh, what a fool she was even to give him a moment's thought. Cruel, cruel, that's what he was. Cruel and conscienceless. And yet, he didn't look like that sort. There was something fine about his darkly lowering face.

"You've got to stop this nonsense," Liane told her image in the mirror. Indeed she looked ghost-like these lovely, misty mornings. There were black circles under her eyes. Her clear skin had a pallid, lifeless look.

"Why did he come here?" she asked herself as she dressed. Why, indeed? The whole thing mystified her. It was like a picture puzzle with one of the pieces missing. The Ladds, who had heard, had closed their house and gone back to town. Why had he come to Willow Stream on the eve of the announcement of his engagement? It was all crazy and muddled-headed. She couldn't figure it out.

As she opened her door she almost collided with the parlor maid who carried a yellow envelope on a tray. "For you, miss," gasped the ### girl fluttering with excitement.

Liane's heart stood still. She tore the ominous thing open. Her eyes raced over the lines. "Mother has pneumonia. Better come. St. Anselm's Hospital, Philadelphia. Elsie."

Liane uttered an small, stifled cry. "Oh, my dear! I should never have left you!"

The maid stared. "Is there anything I can do, Miss Barrett?"

"Yes—no—I don't know. Is Mrs. Cleespaugh up yet?"

"She do be havin' her breakfast along about this time."

Liane said, "I hate to disturb her but I must."

Trembling, she knocked on the door. The commanding voice bade her enter. Mrs. Cleespaugh, long and thin, perched precariously on the bridge of her majestic nose, sat up in her splendid four-poster, reading her letters. Frits of blue-colored chaffin, her bed jacket, streamed around her. Her hair was already splendidly dressed. One could not imagine her in disorder.

WITHOUT a word the young girl put the message into Mrs. Cleespaugh's hands.

"Oh, my dear child, I am frightfully sorry. Of course, you'll want to go. Where is Elsie? Can he see about trains? Van is going in this morning. He can look after you as far as the city. I hate letting you travel by yourself but there's nothing else to do."

Liane said yes, she had money. Yes, she could arrange everything. "Nonsense," said the old lady briskly. "I'm writing you a check for $200. You can pay me back any time." She waved away the girl's thanks.

Reaching for the house telephone she called Elsie's room.

"He's gone, of course," she murmured disgustedly. "You'll find him down at the stables, no doubt. He was talking to Kelly about having the vet in this morning at 10. Try him there."

Liane flew. She found Elsie in consultation with a sandy man in baggy gray clothes. Elsie turned to greet her, exclaiming himself. Liane explained quickly, briefly. She was afraid she might be going to cry.

Instantly the young man was all sympathy. He said to the veteran, "Look, Miles, I've got something frightfully important to attend to. This can go over until tomorrow? Right. I'll see you then. About the same time."

He walked back to the house with her, talking of tickets, schedules. She was grateful for his matter-of-fact air. It helped her to keep from breaking down. If she let herself go—if she thought of her mother, lying ill in that lonely hospital room, she would not be able to go on.

Was she the same girl who had been worrying, a few hours before, because a mere man had caused her pain? What did all that matter? How foolish it seemed now! All that mattered in the wide world was her brave, tired mother, ill in a strange city.

As in a dream Liane packed a bag. She got into her brown tweed dress, put on her old brown felt. What did it matter how she looked? In the great hall downstairs, she saw a tall figure looming. It was

Van.

Obviously he was waiting to see her. He said he was sorry. Was there anything at all he could do? Lifelessly the girl said no. Nora came down with her bag. Kelly had brought the car round, she informed them. Was Mr. Clive outside?

There seemed nothing for Van to do but hand her into the car. Clive was driving the roadster. Kelly, red-faced and solemn, put the bag into the rumble seat and touched his cap.

"I said goodbye to your mother," Liane said vaguely. The car moved. She knew, dimly, that Van had touched her hand, had looked at her with what might have been profound sympathy. She didn't quite know or care what he had said in parting. All that was past.

Clive drove swiftly and surely. They were soon in the Motor Parkway where speed was the expected thing. "You can get the 12 o'clock," he shouted to her above the roar. "No difficulty at all."

SHE never knew later how she had got through that dreadful day. She had a confused impression of the big, busy station, of a porter who took her things. Of Elsie saying swiftly, competently, "I'll park this and find you at the gate. I'll get your ticket. Don't bother about anything."

She remembered waiting at the steps. Busy people, casual and happy people, milled around her. A family party, a pretty mother and a cool black nurse guarding the pink-coated baby. How safe and sure they all were! Trouble did not seem to touch any of them.

"I'll come along if you want me," Elsie offered shyly as he established her in her chair.

Liane was shaken out of her apathy at this. "Oh, no, no, thanks. You're awfully kind," she told him. She didn't need anyone.

She saw his kind, troubled face in that last moment before the train began slowly to move. She even raised her hand to salute him. Liane's eyes filled with tears.

People were good, she thought. It was only when you were in trouble that you found that out. The short journey seemed interminable. Elsie had wired Elsie the time of her arrival but there was no one waiting in the dismal station. She gave the cabman the address of the hospital and then sat staring through the window at the unfamiliar streets.

At the information desk a startled young woman with a detached air told her Mrs. Barrett was in 402. No change, she added. The words chilled Liane. Her heart was full to bursting as she rode up in the creaky, antiseptic smelling elevator. The man looked at her with a faint curiosity. He was accustomed to pallid visitors with terror in their eyes but this one was young—so alone.

A strange Elsie waited outside the door of Cass' room, an Elsie pale and serious. "Glad you've come, kid," she whispered. "Can't go in right now. The doctor's there."

The throbbing of Liane's heart was thunderous. She reached for something to steady herself. "Tell me—" she began, "just how still figure on the bed moved ever so slightly. There was a low moan and the nurse moved swiftly to her patient's side. Alert she stood there, then turned, finger on lip, to sign the watcher with her silence.

"Just the same," she murmured, Liane looked up quickly, hopefully, at the movement. But at the nurse's words the girl's pallor deepened. She settled again in her chair, her eyes never leaving the quiet figure under the coverlet.

Cass was quiet now. Before she had been delirious and that had been awful.

"She mustn't die—she won't die—she can't!" This Liane repeated over and over to herself as if it were a magic litany to chain Cass' spirit.

"Thus the girl had prayed, had hoped, all the long day. She had been at the hospital for three days, now, and the awaited crisis failed to arrive. At night she dreaded going with Elsie back to the hotel. She lay, long hours, in the darkness, every nerve straining for the telephone message she felt sure would rise, with shaking fingers, from the icy water into her red-rimmed eyes. Exhausted, she would dress, wait for the hour when she might creep to her mother's side.

It was all terrible, terrible. She had not known before what anguish could be.

China Faces 20th Summer of Civil War

Revolution-torn China, harried by bandits who murder, kidnap, burn and loot, and confronted by grave dangers in the increasing strength of native Communist forces in the south, is starting its 20th consecutive summer of civil warfare. Oddly enough, the once loyal southern provinces from which President Chiang Kai-Shek launched his march to power in 1926 are now the strongholds of Chinese Communists who demand his overthrow. Down-trodden workmen, poverty-stricken farmers who lease their land from rich landlords and underpaid soldiers prove ready listeners to Communist agitators. As soon as they capture a district, they occupy all government offices and destroy all government records, especially land titles, declaring the property belongs to the people. This finds widespread popularity among poverty-stricken classes. Communist troops are reported well organized. Opium smoking, and in some cases even tobacco, is prohibited under penalty of death. The government is well aware of the gravity of the uprising in the Yangtze valley provinces, where there is a genuine rebel army with 300,000 soldiers, according to reports. President Chiang Kai-Shek's situation is very difficult. There are a dozen independent armies of rival war lords to be contended with in addition to the Red troops. And in the north, there is the age-old sore spot where China rubs shoulders with Russia. In central China, in the region of the Yellow River, troops are reported preparing airplane bases, and digging trenches. The Nanking government must look for much of its aid from Marshal Chang Hsueh-Liang, the young and powerful northern war lord, who has joined Chiang Kai-Shek. Chiang, a thin man in his early 40's, is married to a charming, modern, Wellesley-educated Mayling Soong, sister-in-law of the late Dr. Sun-Yat-Sen, China's first president. He is a strange combination of idealist and war lord. He knows that he must have peace to succeed, but time and again while preparing to demobilize his armies, he has been forced to return to the battlefield. Now he faces another long and bloody struggle.

Where Ford Pays Farmers $5 Per Eight-Hour Day

These pictures show scenes on the 3000-acre "agricultural laboratory" in Lenawee county, southern Michigan, where Henry Ford is putting into effect a $5 per eight-hour day for farm labor, an unheard-of work day and wage in agriculture. Above, workmen are shown improving ground with a bulldozer, school and store. Below, left, is a closeup of the old stone school, which Ford plans to restore and re-establish as it was 100 years ago. The old farmhouse is to be rebuilt and used as a museum for antiques from the neighborhood. At the right below, is the foreman's home, an old house, being restored. One hundred men already are employed on the novel farm.

Bare Chicago Treasury Hinders Mayor Cermak In His Work

CHICAGO.—(P)—The good ship Chicago, buffeted by years of financial storms, still flounders in a sea of debt with no land in sight.

In desperation Chicago's new political pilots are trying to find a way out, but so far they have encountered only new rocks of opposition.

For years Chicago's city government has operated on a hand-to-mouth basis. Mounting costs and tax tangles have piled one acute situation on top of another.

The treasury has been empty more often than not, with payless paydays for city employees and school teachers. Each year has seen an increased deficit.

Just now the city seeks almost any remedy to ease the accumulated burden of nearly $200,000,000 in obligations.

And the financial fate of the nation's second city seems to rest on the uncertain tide of Chicago and Illinois politics.

Mayor Anton J. Cermak, who inherited an empty treasury and millions in debts from the regime of William Hale "Big Bill" Thompson, has approached the dilemma from two angles.

He has urged revision of the laws to simplify Chicago's taxation machinery and to put teeth in the Illinois property tax law, and he has moved to cut city expenses. On both counts he has been balked, more or less.

Illinois legislators turned a deaf ear to his pleas for new tax laws, but Gov. Louis L. Emmerson expressed a willingness to call a special session if Chicago and Cook county draft a set of measures "to avert a breakdown of local government."

Mayor Cermak cut the city's 1931 payroll by more than $5,000,000 by dismissing 3,000 temporary employees, but the city council shielded his proposal to save $2,400,000 by compelling all city employees to take two weeks' vacation without pay.

The city payroll, however, was reduced from $4,734,627 in March, Thompson's last month, to $3,363,976 in May—a difference of $1,370,651.

"I expect considerable opposition to the payless vacation plan," Cermak said, "but we can't eat our pie and give it. It's not a question now of eating pie. Mr. Thompson ate it all."

Cermak's chief cohort in his money-saving campaign is his commissioner of public works, Col. Albert A. Sprague, a suave, astute veteran of Chicago politics.

Summarized briefly, this is Chicago's financial plight.

Unpaid tax anticipation warrants issued by the city and school board total approximately $175,000,000, with interest accruing at nearly $9,000,000 yearly.

Unpaid payrolls recently have varied from $2,700,000 to $5,000,000. Unpaid school payrolls totaled $9,136,000 when schools closed in June.

July 1 interest on the city's full faith and credit obligations or on bonded debts totaled $2,900,000. Interest totaling $460,000 was due by the school board.

Interest-bearing judgments against the city exceed $6,000,000, with interest.

The city has unexpended bond and trust funds of $30,000,000, but these legally can be used only for purposes for which they were voted.

Issuance of tax anticipation warrants long ago became necessary. Only about 60 per cent of the tax levy on Chicago property in 1929, for instance, had been collected by the last of June this year.

Nearly all the 1928 and 1929 delinquent taxes are tied up in the courts.

Taxes for 1931 are not due until October, 1932. Of an issue of $38,000,000 in 1931 tax anticipation warrants against the general corporate fund, the city has sold $11,000,000 to its own funds to meet payrolls.

In a pinch the city may sell the remainder to special bonds funds, thus stopping public improvements.

Unique Court House

diers who traveled the Old Line road, then the only military route that connected Fort Smith, Ark., on the north with Fort Towson on the south.

After the close of the Civil war, Thomas Mills became Polk county judge and moved his family into the log house. There in 1869 his daughter, Nancy Elizabeth, married Elijah Cagle who years later became a member of the first Mena city council.

When Arthur Stilwell built a railroad from Kansas City to the Gulf of Mexico, the town of Mena was established. This early railroad, now a part of the Kansas City Southern, entered the Ouachita mountains through Eagle Pass.

Town site promoters working ahead of the railroad construction crews found Bill Shelton's log cabin intact in 1896, the only structure on the present site of Mena. In laying out the site, surveyors left the cabin in the center of a four square block of land which was set aside as a public park.

This was called Janssen Park, after a Dutch capitalist who helped Stilwell finance the railroad, then queen of Holland.

During this period of early railroad-building, town site promoters, surveyors, and railroad officials used the cabin as a headquarters. For some years it had no tenants and the area surrounding it was the scene of many boom-town disorders and crimes.

Some 20 years ago local sentiment crystallized in a desire to preserve the old dwelling and make it Mena's official public building.

William Jennings Bryan spoke in Janssen Park in his last campaign for the president and Carrie Nation was a speaker there.
